BEFORE

Step into the Woodman residence, where the past meets the present in a seamless blend of nostalgia and modernity. This 1976 home, originally crafted by Margaret and George Bull, has undergone a thoughtful renovation that honors its rich history while infusing it with fresh energy. Over the course of 13 months, the Woodmans meticulously remodeled and added onto the home, preserving many of the original fixtures, cabinets, and wallpaper while breathing new life into these classic elements. The result is a home with a unique feel—where a custom painting of Jerry Garcia greets you with a playful nod to the era.

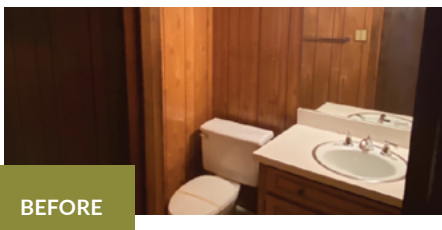

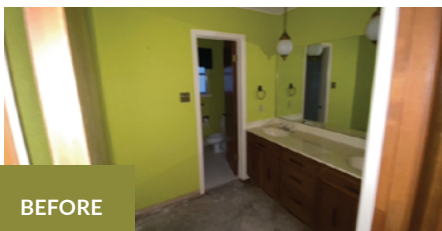

Today, retro charm and contemporary touches come together to make the space feel both timeless and distinctly personal. “Our family has definitely made it a home,” say the Woodmans, reflecting on the journey that has transformed this house into a warm, welcoming haven that honors the past while embracing the future.
